PAINT and BODY PREP SHOP

It may not look like much has changed in this shop - but it has! We took out a long bench, added cabinets and shorter mobile benches, and rearranged things a bit. We have opened up an area that can be utilized for wet sand and buffing without disturbing priming and sanding operations.

A PERFECT PAINT APPLICATION STARTS AT BARE METAL. THE PROCESS HAS CHANGED AND IS BETTER!

How the old paint is removed and getting down for the bare metal respray, has always been a “process”. Currently, here at CPR, we think we have a better method to get the paint off and preserve the Porsche bodies in the process.

Previously, we would laboriously strip to bare metal by blasting with reconstituted glass, hand strip the undercoating, then use Epoxy Primer to stop rust.

Now we send the disassembled shell out and have it dipped in a tank that removes everything down to bare metal. There is no metal distortion which can happen with blasting. Paint and rust is removed in areas that we could not blast. The stripped shell is then put into another tank, and the stripper is neutralized. This is a crucial step. If not neutralized completely, the etching process will continue for years. Once neutralized, the shell is eCoated - a process used by the factory. Ecoating is the black finish. It goes everywhere there is bare metal.

Ecoat will prevent rust, almost forever. It is the best investment you can make when restoring your Porsche.
